WORTHINGTON NATIONAL BANK ANNOUNCES NEW VICE PRESIDENT

FORT WORTH, Texas (Dec. 11, 2015) – Worthington National Bank announced today that the company has hired Jared Treesh as senior vice president, commercial lending. His focus will be on commercial lending and servicing customer relationships.

“Jared Treesh is the right person to serve our commercial clients well as he possesses the full spectrum of banking expertise having worked from the ground up and is committed to providing top notch customer service that is the core of our banking principles,” said Worthington National Bank President Cee Yager.

Treesh has served twelve years in the banking industry, with the last eight of those years in management and commercial lending. Active in several community organizations in the Fort Worth area, his passion for community involvement aligns with the values of Worthington National Bank.

Temporarily, Treesh will work at Worthington National Bank’s Sundance Square location in preparation for the bank’s future Westside growth plans to Edwards Ranch.

About Worthington National Bank

Worthington National Bank, one of the few locally owned and operated banks in Tarrant County, puts a priority on relationship-based banking. There are no 1-800 numbers and no automated phone systems. Offering checking, savings, money market accounts, loans and mortgage services, Worthington National Bank’s philosophy is that all customers are treated the same and clients are a name, not a number. Additionally, Worthington is committed to serving its communities and preserving Texas heritage, history and art. For more information, please visit www.worthingtonbank.com.
