WORTHINGTON NATIONAL BANK ANNOUNCES SYSTEM UPGRADE TO OFFER NEW SERVICES

FORT WORTH, Texas (March 18, 2019) – Worthington National Bank announced today that the company has upgraded its system to offer SecureAlerts for account holders while preparing to launch soft token availability.

SecureAlerts will provide Worthington National Bank account holders with the ability to receive up to 48 different real-time notifications and alerts related to activity on their personal and business accounts. Account holders will be notified of account activity via text message and email for new transactions, ATM withdrawals, online banking password changes and suspicious check clearances.

Soft tokens will soon be available for account holders to help increase security of account functions. The soft tokens can be used to complete tasks including signing into accounts, initiating, reviewing and completing wire transfers.

“We look forward to implementing SecureAlerts and soft tokens for our account holders,” said Greg Morse, chief executive officer of Worthington National Bank. “These newly developed technologies will allow Worthington National Bank to continue delivering superior services to all of our account holders in the most innovative and modernized ways.”

With the recent increase in mobile usage and more reliance on digital technologies to store information, SecureAlerts and soft tokens are cost-effective, convenient and safe for banks and account holders.

About Worthington National Bank

Worthington National Bank, one of the few locally owned and operated banks in Tarrant County, puts a priority on relationship-based banking. There are no 1-800 numbers and no automated phone systems. Offering checking, savings, money market accounts, loans and mortgage services, Worthington National Bank’s philosophy is that all customers are treated the same and clients are a name, not a number. Additionally, Worthington is committed to serving its communities and preserving Texas heritage, history and art. For more information, please visit www.worthingtonbank.com.
